Guiding the Reading

Before Reading

Build Background

- Show students a map of the world and locate Germany and the Czech Republic. Ask students to share anything they know about this part of the world. Then ask them to share any significant historical events they know about that happened in these countries.
- Write the word Holocaust on the board and read it aloud to students. Have them share what they know about the Holocaust. Explain that the Holocaust was an event in history that took place in this part of the world in which people of a particular religion were killed on the basis of their heritage. Point out that during this time, there were people who risked their own lives to save the lives of others. Explain that they will be reading a book about a man named Nicholas Winton, who helped save many children during the Holocaust. Have students share why someone who acted in this way could be considered a hero.

Introduce the Book

- Give students their copy of Escape from the Holocaust. Guide them to the front and back covers and read the title. Have students discuss what they see on the covers. Encourage them to offer ideas as to what type of book it is (genre, text type, and so on) and what it might be about.
- Show students the title page. Discuss the information on the page (title of book, author's name).
- Preview the table of contents on page 3. Remind students that the table of contents provides an overview of the book. Ask students what they expect to read about in the book, on the basis of what they see in the table of contents. (Accept all answers that students can justify.)

Introduce the Reading Strategy: Summarize

- Explain to students that one way to understand a text is to summarize the information. Readers can write a summary, or brief overview, of the key ideas of each section to understand and remember what they have read. A summary will typically answer the questions who, what, when, where, and why.

- Create a chart on the board with the headings Who, What, When, Where, and Why. Read pages 4–6 with students. Have them discuss with a partner what should be written under each heading on the chart. Invite volunteers to share with the class and record their answers on the board. Encourage students to ask and answer these questions as they read, using the chart as a guide.

Introduce the Comprehension Skill:

Author's purpose

- Explain to students that authors have a purpose, or reason, for what they write. Write the words inform, entertain, and persuade on the board. Explain to students that to inform means to provide information about the topic, to entertain means to amuse the reader, and to persuade means to convince the reader to act or feel a certain way. Point out that within a text, readers can often find evidence for more than one of these.
- Have students think about a book they are familiar with. Have them discuss with a partner the author's main purpose for writing that book. Have students share their rationale.
- Have students turn to page 4 and read the first paragraph with a partner. Ask students what they think the author's purpose is on the basis of the introduction. Explain that they need to find evidence from that page to support their choice. Invite students to share their thoughts with the class.

Vocabulary

Have students turn to the "Words to Know" box on the copyright page. Discuss each word with students. Then, have students turn to the glossary on page 24. Explain that the glossary provides definitions for the vocabulary words in the book. Point out the use of each content word and academic vocabulary word in the book, and then use each word in a different model sentence. Have students work in groups to create posters for these words. Have them include on each poster the word and its part of speech, the definition, the word in an example sentence, and a picture illustrating the meaning of the word.

Set the Purpose

- Have students read to find out more about Nicholas Winton. Write the Focus Question on the board. Invite students to look for evidence in the book to support their answer to the question.
- Have students make a small question mark in their book beside any word they do not understand or cannot pronounce. These can be addressed in a future discussion.

During Reading

Text-Dependent Questions

As students read the book, monitor their understanding with the following questions. Encourage students to support their answers by citing evidence from the book.

- Who is Vera Gissing? Why did the author include her insights in this book? (level 2) multiple pages
- How did Martin Blake influence Nicholas Winton in his humanitarian efforts? (level 1) page 7
- Who was Adolf Hitler, and what was the extent of his plans in Europe? (level 2) pages 8–12
- In what way did Nicholas Winton open his heart to the Czech children? (level 3) multiple pages
- What obstacles did Winton face as he tried to find new homes for the children? (level 2) pages 12–16
- In what ways is Nicholas Winton a modern-day knight? (level 3) multiple pages
- What was the impact of Winton meeting Vera Gissing and other survivors? (level 1) page 22
- How does the saying "Save one life, save the world," relate to the actions of Nicholas Winton? (level 3) multiple pages

Text Features: Table of contents

Explain that the table of contents helps readers identify key topics in the text in the order they are presented. Have students read the table of contents on page 3. Explain that it provides readers with an outline of the topics they will read about and they order in which they will be presented. Ask students the following questions: Which section do you think will give information on the build-up to World War II? Which section do you think will provide insight into Winton's personal experience of saving the Czech children? Inform students that they can also use the table of contents to identify sections to summarize, which helps them better understand the text. Then, have students stop to summarize after each section they read.

Skill Review

- Lead a discussion with students to determine the author's purpose for writing this book. Guide students to an understanding that the author's purpose is to inform readers. Write author's purpose is to inform on the board. Ask students to cite examples from the text that support this idea.
- Model evaluating details to determine the author's purpose.

Think-aloud: I know the author's purpose is to inform readers. On pages 4 through 6, the author introduces the readers to Vera Gissing, a woman who was saved by Nicholas Winton as a child. The author includes historical facts and information about her experience to help readers better understand the events of this time. On pages 8 through 11, the author also includes historical information about Hitler and his plans in Europe.

These historical facts inform readers about the context of the Holocaust. The text continues to provide information, rather than amuse or persuade readers.

- Model how to complete the author's purpose worksheet. Have students identify details from the book and circle them. Then, have students discuss the details with a partner and determine the author's purpose for the book.

After Reading

Ask students what words, if any, they marked in their book. Use this opportunity to model how they can read these words using decoding strategies and context clues.

Skill Review

Graphic Organizer: Author's purpose

Review the author's purpose worksheet that students completed. Have students share their work in groups. Invite volunteers to share with the rest of the class the details they chose.

Comprehension Extension

Discussion cards covering comprehension skills and strategies not explicitly taught with the book are provided for extension activities.

Response to Focus Question

Have students cite specific evidence from the book to answer the Focus Question. (Answers should include the following information: Nicholas Winton was a British citizen who became involved in helping people whose lives were being threatened before and during the Holocaust. Winton is considered a hero because he arranged for hundreds of Czech children to safely escape and be received in loving homes in the United Kingdom and in Sweden.)

Comprehension Checks

- Book quiz
- Retelling rubric

Book Extension Activities

Build Skills

Grammar and Mechanics: Adjectives

- Have students look at the cover of the book. Ask them to come up with a list of words that describe the people. Have volunteers share the words they came up with and write the words on the board.
- Point out that the words they just listed are called adjectives. Explain that adjectives are words that describe nouns and pronouns and that adjectives tell which one, how many, or what kind.

- Write the following sentence on the board: In 1938, Nicholas Winton was a twenty-nine-year-old banker working in London who had big plans for his Christmas holiday: a ski vacation in the Alps with his good friend Martin Blake. Have students work with a partner to identify all of the adjectives in sentence and whether each adjective answers the questions which one, how many, or what kind. Invite students to share their findings with the class.
- Check for understanding: Have students reread page 11 with a partner to circle all of the adjectives. Then have them identify whether each adjective answers which one, how many, or what kind. Invite students to share their findings with the class.
- Independent practice: Introduce, explain, and have students complete the adjectives worksheet. If time allows, discuss their answers.

Word Work: Content vocabulary

- Explain to students that understanding the vocabulary in a book helps readers gain a deeper understanding of the text. Discuss difficult words from the text. Encourage students to use context clues to help them determine the meaning of these words. Guide them to the boldface words in the text that have definitions in the glossary.
- Have students complete the Predicted Meaning column of the content vocabulary worksheet. Then have them make a checkmark in the column if each definition matched their predicted definition. If not, have students write the correct definition in the Revised Meaning column. Have students turn to a partner and use each content vocabulary word in a complete sentence.
- Have students turn over the content vocabulary worksheet and write three sentences using three of the vocabulary words. Invite them to erase the vocabulary words in each sentence and exchange papers with a partner. Have students fill in the missing word in each sentence. Invite volunteers to share their sentences with the class.
