11. Answers will vary but should describe the various subjects mentioned by the Mock Turtle and the Gryphon, including Ambition, Distraction, Reeling, Writhing, and so on. Students will compare these to the subjects they learn, for example addition, subtraction, reading, and writing. Answers should then offer opinions as to which school sounds better and why.
12. Answers should indicate the following: The Duchess's morals do not actually teach Alice anything at all, but are instead a collection of odd sayings and strange logic that are just as unusual as Wonderland itself. They are wordy and sound intelligent, but actually are meaningless. The Duchess's morals show a little bit more of her character. She also acts serious and thoughtful, but her character is as empty as her morals.
