In 1917, private james robert conroy snuck his dog, stubby, aboard the minnesota, the ship that would be carrying conroy's regiment to war. stubby soon became the mascot of conroy's regiment, and some soldiers made stubby his own set of dog tags. stubby even won over the regiment's new commander, colonel john parker. He issued an order that stubby had to remain with conroy.

stubby was one of the many dogs used by both sides during world war i. However, he stood out from all the others. stubby could detect the smell of gas seeping into allied lines and barked to warn the other soldiers. He helped wounded soldiers get back to medical attention. He even captured a german soldier and was made an unofficial sergeant. sergeant stubby outranked his owner, corporal james conroy.

The war ended in november 1918 with the surrender of germany. Due to his brave service, stubby received much attention and many honors. He met president woodrow wilson, and they shook hands. He was inducted into the american legion and made a member of the ymca. He was invited to the white house by president warren harding. Even after his death, stubby was honored one final time, as he was recognized as a war hero by the smithsonian institution. sergeant stubby was truly an amazing animal.
