Guiding the Reading

Before Reading

Build Background

- Create a KWLS chart on the board. Review or explain that the K stands for knowledge we know, the W stands for questions we want to know, the L stands for the knowledge we learned, and the S stands for the questions we still have.
- Ask students what they already know about the American Revolution. Have students work in groups to list causes of the American Revolution and discuss the impact the war had on the colonies. Invite volunteers to share with the class. Use the information generated to fill in the K column of the class KWLS chart.
- Ask students what they want to know about the American Revolution. Write their questions in the W column of the KWLS chart.

Introduce the Book

- Give students their copy of Battling for Independence. Guide them to the front and back covers and read the title. Have students discuss what they see on the covers. Encourage them to offer ideas as to what type of book it is (genre, text type, and so on) and what it might be about.
- Show students the title page. Discuss the information on the page (title of book, author's name).
- Preview the table of contents on page 3. Remind students that the table of contents provides an overview of the book. Ask students what they expect to read about in the book, on the basis of what they see in the table of contents. (Accept all answers that students can justify.)

Introduce the Reading Strategy:

Ask and answer questions

Explain to students that asking and answering questions while reading can help readers understand and remember information in a book. Direct students to the index on page 24 and model asking questions about the topics in the list. Have students create a KWLS chart on a piece of paper. Review the index with students. Have students work with a partner to write down what they already know about the topics in the index in the K column. Have students write at least one question they have while reading in the W column.

Introduce the Comprehension Skill:

Make inferences / draw conclusions

- Explain to students that not all information in a book is directly stated. Point out that sometimes readers need to make inferences and draw conclusions by using details in the story to understand the indirect language used. Explain that an inference is a conclusion drawn when readers connect clues in text to information they already know and that making inferences during reading allows readers to understand ideas in a text on a deeper level.
- Ask students to turn to the table of contents on page 3. Point out the section titled “Declaring Independence.” Ask students to make an inference about this section. Explain that this title leads the reader to think that there must have been an official break between the colonists and Great Britain (the word declaring implies that there must have been something revealed to the world about colonial independence).

Vocabulary

Have students turn to the “Words to Know” box on the copyright page. Discuss each word with students. Then, have students turn to the glossary on page 23. Explain that the glossary provides definitions for the vocabulary words in the book. Point out the use of each content word and academic vocabulary word in the book, and then use each word in a different model sentence. Have students work in groups to create posters for these words. Have them include on each poster the word and its part of speech, the definition, the word in an example sentence, and a picture illustrating the meaning of the word.

Set the Purpose

- Have students read to find out more about how the battles of the Revolutionary War led to the creation of the United States of America. Write the Focus Question on the board. Invite students to look for evidence in the book to support their answer.
- Have students make a small question mark in their book beside any word they do not understand or cannot pronounce. These can be addressed in a future discussion.

During Reading

Text-Dependent Questions

As students read the book, monitor their understanding with the following questions. Encourage students to support their answers by citing evidence from the book.

- What conclusions can you draw about King George III? (level 3) page 4
- What might have happened if George Washington had not been named commander of the Continental Army? (level 3) multiple pages
- How did the Continental Army compare to the British Army? (level 2) multiple pages
- What was the sequence of the battles of Bunker Hill and Breed’s Hill? (level 3) pages 9–11
- How is the Declaration of Independence related to the American Revolution? (level 3) page 13
- Which facts support the idea that the Continental Army struggled during the war? (level 3) pages 14–17
- Which is the most important battle in the Revolutionary War? (level 1) page 20
- How would you describe the Patriots? (level 2) multiple pages

Text Features: Maps

Explain that maps help readers understand where places are in the world. Have students work with a partner to review the map on page 22. Ask students: What do the red dots on the map represent? How does the map show the important sites of the Revolutionary War? How could you use the map to explain how colonists united against Great Britain? Have students review the other maps in the book and discuss in groups what the maps show, how they show it, and why that information is important. Invite volunteers to share their thoughts with the rest of the class.

Skill Review

- Model for students how you ask and record questions while reading, using the KWLS chart as a guide. Invite volunteers to share their questions with the rest of the class. Discuss with students how learning the answers to their questions will help them better understand the book.
- Have students work in groups to periodically review the details they have read and discuss inferences they made. Have groups discuss why some people did not support independence from Great Britain.
- Model evaluating details to make inferences and draw conclusions.

Think-aloud: The book is providing me with many details about colonists who did not support independence from Great Britain. These Loyalists may have been afraid of the British, or they may have thought the colonists would not win against the British. This is supported by details that describe Washington’s troops as a ragtag group with few weapons and little or no training against the British, who had a powerful, a well-supplied army and navy.

- Model how to complete the make-inferences-draw-conclusions worksheet. Have students identify details from the book and circle them. Then, have students discuss the details with a partner and try to determine their deeper meaning.

After Reading

Ask students what words, if any, they marked in their book. Use this opportunity to model how they can read these words using decoding strategies and context clues.

Worksheet: Make inferences / Draw conclusions

Review the make-inferences-draw-conclusions worksheet that students completed. Have students share their work in groups. Invite volunteers to share with the rest of the class the details they chose, and have students write inferences made on the board. Discuss with students the justification for choosing these inferences.

Comprehension Extension

Discussion cards covering comprehension skills and strategies not explicitly taught with the book are provided for extension activities.

Response to Focus Question

Have students cite specific evidence from the book to answer the Focus Question. (Answers will vary. Reasons should include characteristics that made colonists stronger and united in the battles of the Revolutionary War. Samples: During the Revolutionary War, colonists volunteered, sacrificed, and suffered for their independence from Great Britain. This gave them courage and boosted morale to break free from British rule. The Second Continental Congress drafted a Declaration of Independence and gained support from influential nations.)

Comprehension Checks

- Book quiz
- Retelling rubric

Book Extension Activities

Build Skills

Grammar and Mechanics: Compound adjectives

- Ask students what an adjective is. Explain to students that adjectives are words that describe nouns. Ask students to think of adjectives that describe the Revolutionary War. Record a list of volunteered answers on the board.

- Explain to students that when two adjectives are combined to describe a noun, it is called a compound adjective. Point out that some compound adjectives have a hyphen to clarify what they are describing. Write the sentence: These soldiers would be fighting against the powerful, well-trained, and well-supplied military of Britain. Circle the word military. Have a volunteer come to the board and underline the words that describe the military (powerful, well-trained, and well-supplied).
- Have students turn to page 17 in the book. Ask students to look for compound adjectives. Have students underline or highlight the compound adjectives they find.
- Check for understanding: Have students share with the class the compound adjectives they found. Have the class give a thumbs-up signal when they hear a correct example.
- Independent practice: Introduce, explain, and have students complete the compound adjectives worksheet. If time allows, discuss their answers.

Word Work: Prefixes dis-, mis-, un-

- Write the following prefixes on the board: dis-, mis-, and un-. Discuss the meaning of each prefix: dis- (apart from, not), mis- (wrong), un- (not).
- Have students turn to page 10 in the text and locate the word misunderstood. Ask what this word means (understood wrongly). Have students explain how the meaning of the sentence would be changed if the prefix mis- were not part of the word. Repeat the process with the words disadvantage (page 10) and unpopular (page 4).
- Check for understanding: Write the following words on the board: interested, believable, and represent. Have students identify the meaning of each root word. Then have students add the prefixes dis-, un-, and mis- (disinterested, unbelievable, misrepresent). Have students identify how the meaning of each word has changed.
- Independent practice: Introduce, explain, and have students complete the prefixes worksheet. If time allows, discuss their answers.
