George Washington was a hero because he helped the United States win its freedom from the British.

Washington's Monument The Washington Monument was built to honor George Washington. George Washington was a hero. He was the first president of the United States.

The monument is in Washington, D.C. It is in an area called the National Mall.

The monument is the tallest building in the city.

A law says that no other building in the city can be taller.

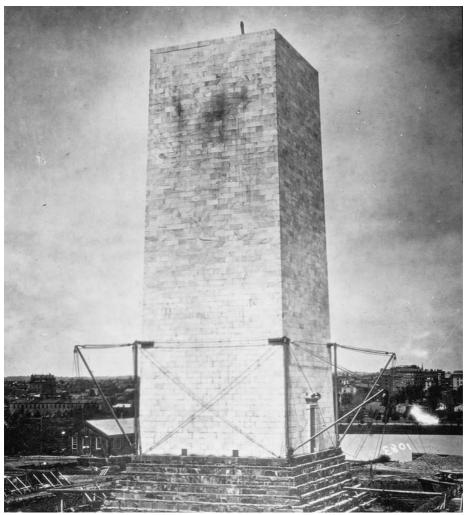

The monument can be seen from many miles away.

The monument is also as tall as eight White Houses.

The monument is 555 feet (169 m) tall. That is as tall as twenty-nine giraffes! It is built of stone.

In 1861, the monument was only 150 feet (45.7 m) tall.

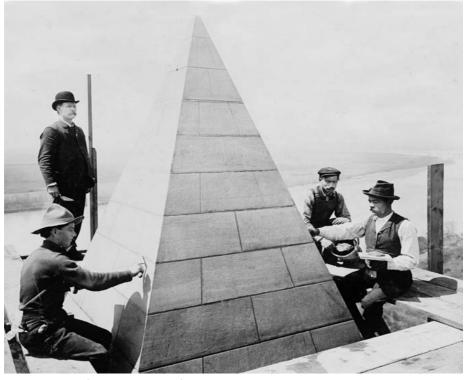

Work on the monument started in 1848.

Work stopped and started many times.

At times, there was not enough money.

Work was also stopped by a war in the United States.

The monument first opened in 1885.

Workers finish the top of the monument.

Do You Know?

To get to the top, people had to climb 898 steps!

This statue of George Washington, inside the Washington Monument, used to be inside the Lincoln Memorial.

What's Inside?

People can go inside the monument.

It has a statue of

George Washington.

It also has a museum.

People can see special stones

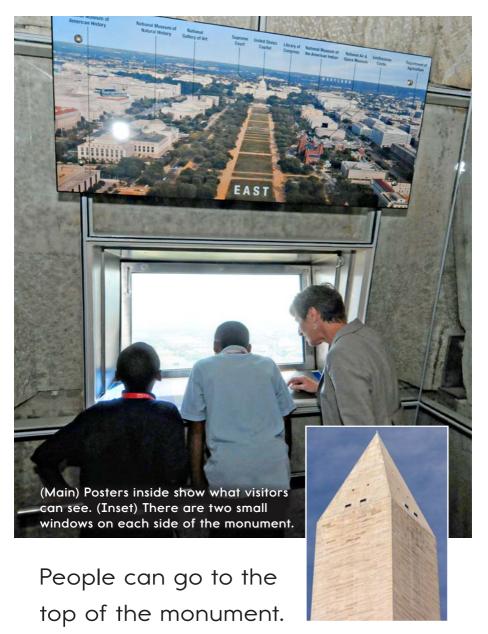

on the inside walls.
Some stones were gifts from U.S. states.
Other stones were gifts from people who wanted the monument to be built.

This stone from New York State has the Latin word for "higher" on it.

Some of the special stones came from places outside the United States, such as this one from Wales.

They can look out and see Washington, D.C.

What's Outside?

Around the monument are fifty U.S. flags.
The fifty flags stand for the fifty states.

A big stone at the corner of the monument has many things inside it. The things honor George Washington and the United States.

The flags stay up all day and all night.

Oh. No-Cracks!

An earthquake damaged the monument in 2011.

Then a storm damaged it more.

It took almost three years to repair

(Main) Workers look for cracks in the stone blocks (inset) after the 2011 earthquake.

The grass near the monument is a great place to fly kites or have picnics.

Many people visit the Washington Monument each year.

If you visit it, what would you want to see?
